SYMPTOMS: Symptoms of exposure to this compound may include nausea, vomiting, bone marrow suppression, leukopenia, thrombocytopenia, hepatotoxicity, hepatic vein thrombosis and hepatocellular necrosis. Other symptoms may include hemopoietic depression, anemia, anaphylaxis, anorexia, diarrhea, facial paresthesias, death, and rarely, erythematous and urticarial rashes, and photosensitivity reactions. It may cause cardiovascular collapse, burning of the throat, abdominal pain, oliguria, anuria, delirium, fall of blood pressure, convulsions, muscular weakness with respiratory failure and collapse. Large doses may cause gastrointestinal bleeding. Exposure may also result in alopecia, facial flushing, and a flu-like syndrome of fever, myalgias and malaise. It can cause chills, dermatological reactions and neurotoxicity. ACUTE/CHRONIC HAZARDS: There is limited evidence that this compound is carcinogenic in humans. When heated to its melting point it decomposes violently and emits toxic fumes of nitrogen oxides. (NTP, 1992)

PRECAUTIONS FOR "CARCINOGENS": A high-efficiency particulate arrestor (HEPA) or charcoal filters can be used to minimize amt of carcinogen in exhausted air ventilated safety cabinets, lab hoods, glove boxes or animal rooms ... Filter housing that is designed so that used filters can be transferred into plastic bag without contaminating maintenance staff is available commercially. Filters should be placed in plastic bags immediately after removal ... The plastic bag should be sealed immediately ... The sealed bag should be labelled properly ... Waste liquids ... should be placed or collected in proper containers for disposal. The lid should be secured & the bottles properly labelled. Once filled, bottles should be placed in plastic bag, so that outer surface ... is not contaminated ... The plastic bag should also be sealed & labelled. ... Broken glassware ... should be decontaminated by solvent extraction, by chemical destruction, or in specially designed incinerators. Chemical Carcinogens
